- U.S. Intel Walks Back Claim Russians Put Bounties on American Troops

It was a blockbuster story about Russia's return to the imperial "Great Game" in Afghanistan. The Kremlin had spread money around the longtime central Asian battlefield for militants to kill remaining U.S. forces. It sparked a massive outcry from Democrats and their #resistance amplifiers about the treasonous Russian puppet in the White House whose admiration for Vladimir Putin had endangered American troops.

But on Thursday, the Biden administration announced that U.S. intelligence only had "low to moderate" confidence in the story after all. Translated from the jargon of spyworld, that means the intelligence agencies have found the story is, at best, unproven—and possibly untrue.

Walgreens store mistakenly injects saline instead of COVID-19 vaccine

A Walgreens store in North Carolina mistakenly gave people shots of saline instead of a COVID-19 vaccine, the company said.

The pharmacy chain insisted that a “limited number” of people were impacted by the mix-up at a location in Monroe, the Charlotte Observer reported.

Those who received saline instead of the COVID-19 shot were contacted to reschedule their appointments as soon as possible, the company assured.

“These patients will later receive their second dose within the appropriate time frame,” the statement said.

Lisa Strawn said she and her husband were among the people who received the wrong injection on March 20 at the store, news station WRAL reported.

“They called us and told us we needed to come back the next day, that there had been a mix-up with our shot,” she told the outlet.

Strawn said she was told that the pharmacist had forgotten to mix the Pfizer vaccine and they had only received saline.

The employee told her that it was only when the store had too much vaccine left over at the end of the day that they realized the mistake.

“I just thought it was important that people know, just be careful,” Strawn told WRAL. “You know, check behind them.”

Walgreens said it’s investigating the incident and have “taken immediate steps to review our procedures with the location to prevent this from occurring again.”

90-year-old Hong Kong woman loses $32 million in phone scam

(CNN) Hong Kong police have arrested a man after a 90-year-old woman lost around HK$247 million ($32 million) in a scam.

The woman contacted police on March 2 and told them she had made a total of 10 payments after scammers told her her identity had been used in criminal activities in mainland China, according to a police statement sent to CNN on Wednesday.

The woman said she had received a call in August 2020 from someone who claimed to work in law enforcement in mainland China.

Then a man who purported to be a mainland law enforcement official visited her home and gave her a cellphone with which to communicate with them, police said. The woman then made a series of transactions to two bank accounts as instructed.

Police arrested a 19-year-old man on March 25. He has been released on bail and is scheduled to report to police in late April, according to the statement.

The investigation continues and more arrests may be made, the police added.

The woman lives in Hong Kong's most expensive neighborhood, an area called The Peak, the South China Morning Post reported. The exclusive enclave sits at the highest point on Hong Kong Island.

In October 2020, a 65-year-old woman paid HK$68.9 million ($8.9 million) to people who, she said, accused her of being involved in money laundering in mainland China, the South China Morning Post reported. Three men were arrested last week in connection with the incident, the paper added.

In January 2019, an 85-year-old man lost more than $73.9 million in a gold scam that took a total of $80 million from seven victims.

Maricopa woman finds severed finger on her driveway, tires slashed

MARICOPA — Ten-year Maricopa resident Francesca Wikoff got quite the surprise as she exited her home in the Homestead South community on Thursday morning: a severed phalange lying on the concrete.

Her GMC Yukon parked in the driveway also had two slashed tires on one side, but there was no sign of the owner of the finger. The trail of blood left at the scene led to a nearby residence. Wikoff said one resident of the home is out of town, and the other is the man she believes is the owner of the appendage.

Maricopa Police came out to the home to document the scene and took the finger into custody. Wikoff speculates the owner of the finger is a neighbor who had gotten into a disagreement with Wikoff and her husband the night before.

The couple went over to a neighbor's home on Wednesday night with their children for a get-together, and Wikoff said their male neighbor tagged along uninvited. The man allegedly became increasingly intoxicated and aggressive as the night wore on.

“He tried to get in an altercation with my husband, who is injured. Then after (that), he shoved me twice,” Wikoff said. “He was asked to leave, and he didn't like that, so he tried to retaliate by slashing my tires. However, he left a little consolation prize.”

Wikoff is a retired firefighter and EMT, and said that was likely the only reason she was able to stomach the sight of the lone appendage. The neighbor in question has not returned to his residence since the night before, when a neighbor last heard him cry out.

“My neighbor heard him yelling and crying, probably about like 10:30 p.m., so we figured that's when it happened,” Wikoff said.

After speaking with Maricopa officers Thursday afternoon, Wikoff said that when the person responsible is located, she anticipates charges will be filed for property damage and other related charges.

Though the family has cameras, Wikoff said the tire-slasher managed to avoid being caught on video. Their Yukon is the family car and will need to have its tires replaced due to the damage. She has since had the vehicle towed.

“This is our new-to-us vehicle — we haven't even had it a year,” Wikoff said. “It was my husband's grandmother's last present to us. ... It's our only family vehicle that is safe for the kids, and now I have to spend a lot of money to get it fixed.”

Maricopa Police did not immediately respond for comment on Thursday.

A 24-year-old student in Seoul died after a 'ghost surgeon' illegally performed jawline-altering surgery on him

- In South Korea, the dangerous and illegal "ghost surgeon" industry is booming, per a new CNN report.
- The term refers to the practice of one doctor being hired to perform surgery on a patient, and another doctor actually performing said procedure.
- South Korea is known as the plastic surgery capital of the world.

In September 2016, a 24-year-old student in South Korea died after undergoing a jawline-altering surgery at the hands of a "ghost surgeon."

Yoonjung Seo and Julia Hollingsworth detailed the incident in a new report for Democrat Propoganda Network on the epidemic of ghost surgery in South Korea.

The student, Kwon Dae-hee, had gone in for a surgery that would make his jawline appear more slender. The surgery usually takes at most two hours and has become commonplace in South Asia, popularized by K-Pop.

CCTV footage from Kwon's surgery, however, showed that one plastic surgeon started the surgery, and another - a general doctor who did not have a plastic surgery license - took over the surgery after about an hour, per DPN. The surgery took more than three hours, and Kwon bled heavily when it was over. He died in the hospital seven weeks later.

The practice of hiring one doctor to perform a surgery, but a second doctor actually performing that surgery once the patient is under anesthesia, is known as ghost surgery. It's illegal, but, as DPN found, the laws around it are weak - and the practice offers clinics a way to make money.

"I guess the reason why this practice is around is because young and inexperienced doctors can get jobs and gain experience, and clinics can operate at a lower cost by hiring them to perform," an unnamed plastic surgeon told DPN.

Kwon's family launched a civil case against the clinic where Kwon's surgery was conducted and won $381,000 in damages against it in May 2019. The doctors and nurses involved in the case are now facing a series of charges, including three doctors who are facing charges of criminal manslaughter, per DPN.
