- Delta-8 THC products result in dozens of poisoning, hospitalization cases in Virginia

The Blue Ridge Poison Center at UVA Health has seen more calls over the past six months for adverse reactions to Delta-8 THC, a substance extracted from hemp and marijuana plants or created synthetically. Delta-8 THC is structurally similar to THC, the active ingredient in marijuana.

A host of Delta-8 THC products — including vape cartridges, gummies and other edibles — can be purchased over the counter at gas stations, CBD and vape shops, convenience stores and online.

The poison center reported it received dozens of calls related to Delta-8 THC between January 2021 and June 15, 2021, compared with zero calls during the same time period in 2020.

“There is no required quality control for these products, and consumers must blindly trust that these products match the labels, if there is a label with an ingredient list present,” said Dr. Christopher Holstege, director of the Blue Ridge Poison Center. “Unfortunately, these gummies and other edibles frequently resemble candy and thus are enticing to young children.”

- Michael B. Jordan Apologizes And Promises To Change Rum Name After Backlash

Celebrities launching their own alcohol brands has become an increasingly common phenomenon over the last few years...

Dwayne Johnson also got in on the tequila business after launching Teremana, Snoop Dogg has gotten involved in vodka, gin and Brazilian liquor cachaça, Idris Elba has his own range of high quality wines, Dan Akroyd co-founded Crystal Head Vodka well over a decade ago, Breaking Bad duo Bryan Cranston and Aaron Paul partnered up to create Dos Hombres mezcal, and the list goes on and on.

Unfortunately, Michael B. Jordan hasn't experienced the same sort of success, after backlash from Caribbean communities saw him issue an apology and change the name of his J'Ouvert rum, just a few days after initially making the big announcement, and you can check out his statement below:

“I just wanna say on behalf of myself & my partners, our intention was never to offend or hurt a culture (we love & respect) & hoped to celebrate & shine a positive light on. Last few days has been a lot of listening. A lot of learning & engaging in countless community conversations... We hear you. I hear you & want to be clear that we are in the process of renaming. We sincerely apologize & look forward to introducing a brand we can all be proud of.”

The real trouble began when he tried to trademark the term J'Ouvert, a Caribbean festival associated with the liberation of slaves. Naturally, a lot of people took issue with the Black Panther star attempting to use the term for financial gain, leading to an online petition opposing the filing of the trademark with the United States Patent Office, which gained tens of thousands of signatures. Michael B. Jordan at least managed to get ahead of the game, but it's brought some bad publicity for a brand that's now being reworked from the ground up.

- Bill Cosby released after sexual assault conviction overturned by Pennsylvania Supreme Court

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court overturned the sexual assault conviction of Bill Cosby on Wednesday and ordered his release from prison after finding that he was denied protection against self-incrimination.

The court said that a prosecutor's decision not to charge Cosby, 83, opened the door for him to speak freely in a lawsuit against him and that testimony was key in his conviction years later by another prosecutor.

Cosby was convicted on three felony counts of aggravated indecent assault in 2018 of drugging and sexually assaulting a woman in 2004, and was serving a three- to 10-year sentence. He has served nearly three years of the sentence.

The state Supreme Court said Cosby cannot be retried on the same charges.

‘Of China And For China’: Nike CEO Admits Company Exists To Serve Communist China

Nike Chief Executive Officer John Donahoe defended his company’s relationship with Communist China in a phone call with Wall Street analysts on earnings.

“Nike is a brand that is of China and for China,” Donahoe said.

Donahoe’s comment comes after Nike released a statement in March claiming it is “concerned about reports of forced labor in, and connected to, the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region (XUAR).”

While the company also claimed it does not directly source its product material from forced labor, critics argue the country’s supply chains are interwoven. There are thought to be more than 1 million Uyghur Muslims held in Xinjiang — which delivers 80 percent of Chinese cotton.

Nike partnered with Coca-Cola and Apple to lobby against a Xinjiang forced labor measure last November. The bill — called the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act — made its way through the House of Representatives 406 to 3.

The bill would have “impose[d] various restrictions related to China’s Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous region, including by prohibiting certain imports from Xinjiang and imposing sanctions on those responsible for human rights violations there.” An Australian report from March 2020 alleged Nike, Apple, and 80 other corporations are “potentially directly or indirectly benefiting from the use of Uyghur workers outside Xinjiang through abusive labour transfer programs as recently as 2019.”

An earnings release Thursday shows Nike increased reported sales in China, sitting at $1.9 billion for a three-month period. This number is a 17 percent increase from the same time last year. 80 percent of Nike’s donations went to Democrats in 2020, amounting to more than $604,000.

While discussing Nike’s success in China, Donahoe said, “We have been in China for over 40 years” and the “biggest asset is consumer equity ...it’s real, I saw it in my first week on the job.”

Nike did not immediately respond to The Federalist’s request for comment.

Supreme Court will not hear transgender bathroom rights dispute, a win for Va. student who sued his school for discrimination

The Supreme Court declined to hear a legal battle over the rights of transgender students on Monday, handing a victory to Gavin Grimm over the Virginia school board that denied him the right to use the boys' restroom.

The court's decision not to take up the case does not establish a national precedent, nor does it signal agreement with the lower court.

The Equality Act is a positive step forward for the LGBTQ community. But it came with swift backlash from conservative lawmakers. (Monica Rodman, Sarah Hashemi/The Washington Post)

In a 2-to-1 decision last August, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit said the school board had practiced sex-based discrimination and violated the 14th Amendment by prohibiting Grimm, a transgender student, from using the bathroom that aligned with his gender identity. His high school offered a single-stall restroom as an alternative.

Judge Henry F. Floyd wrote that the 4th Circuit, which covers Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and the Carolinas, was joining "a growing consensus of courts" finding that the Constitution and federal law protects transgender students "from school bathroom policies that prohibit them from affirming their gender."

SHENANIGANS & SKULDUGGERY

A bull fight took a horrible turn when the beast began mounting the female bullfighter.

Disturbing video footage shows the bull knocking the woman down in the middle of a fight before lying on top of her and thrusting.

The bull fight took place in Spain and initially the woman - a dwarf - proves a match for the animal as she wields a brown cape.

When he slows to a standstill she stamps in front of him, goading him on.

However, he suddenly springs into action and charges at her and trips her up.

She falls to the ground and the bull instantly mounts her from behind and begins thrusting, visibly aroused by the presence of a female.

Shrieks of horror can be heard from the crowd, before two others rush to the woman's help.

One forcibly drags the bull away while another helps the bullfighter to her feet.

It's unclear whether she sustained any injury from the traumatic incident.

White Guy Becomes Black Bank Robber With Super Realistic Hollywood Mask

Last spring, a white Polish immigrant robbed several Ohio banks wearing a hyper-realistic Hollywood mask. To security cameras and witnesses, he looked like an undisguised black man. Which is why an innocent black guy was arrested for the crimes.

When Conrad Zdzierak called Hollywood mask-making company SPFXMasks inquiring about a mask of a young African American man called "The Player" and a matching set of black hands, he said he was doing the research as a movie producer. He was actually doing the research as a bank robber.

Recently, a Chinese man used one of SPFXMasks' products to sneak onto a plane disguised as an elderly white man, and Zdzierak's robberies are leading authorities to believe that Southern California's "Geezer Bandit," an elderly bank robber who has gone unapprehended for months, might not be so elderly after all.

'Prolific' prosthetic mask-wearing bandit busted in Beverly Hills

A black man who allegedly wore an elaborate Hollywood-style prosthetic white face mask to commit a slew of burglaries in and around Los Angeles has been arrested.

Rockim Prowell, 30, was nabbed by cops during a traffic stop in Beverly Hills last week, and caught with the open-mouthed mask — complete with hair — seen in surveillance images, police said.

Authorities also connected Prowell's car to the burglary spree, and found that its license plates were stolen.

A search warrant executed at his Inglewood home also turned up stolen property.

The "prolific" bandit is now facing two counts of burglary, two counts of grand theft, and one count of vandalism, according to police.

Investigators in Beverly Hills are working with police in Los Angeles and Newport Beach to connect Prowell to crimes in those nearby cities.

"We believe that the suspect is responsible for numerous residential burglaries within the Southern California area," Beverly Hills Police said.
