- Bill Cosby reportedly talking to promoters about potential comedy tour

Bill Cosby is reportedly “excited the way the world is welcoming him back”.

Just days after his release from prison, Bill Cosby is already eyeing a return to stand-up comedy.

According to the Hollywood Reporter, the newly freed comedian’s spokesperson Andrew Wyatt told reporters Thursday that Cosby has been “been talking to a number of promoters and comedy club owners” and “is just excited the way the world is welcoming him back”.

“A number of promoters have called. Comedy club owners have called. People want to see him,” Wyatt told Inside Edition.

The pivot to comedy comes just days after 83-year-old Cosby was freed from prison after serving more than two years of a three-to-10-year sentence following dozens of women accusing him of rape and sexual assault.

- THE WORLD’S FIRST LAB-GROWN SUSHI BAR IS ABOUT TO OPEN IN SAN FRANCISCO

Aquaculture startup Wildtype will soon serve slaughter-free, sushi-grade salmon at its pilot facility in San Francisco, which is capable of producing 200,000 pounds of lab-grown fish per year without destroying the ocean.

This fall, a first-of-its-kind sushi bar is slated to open in San Francisco, CA where all the fish on the menu has never been pulled from the ocean, or been alive, for that matter. That’s because the sushi bar is operated by Wildtype, an aquaculture startup that grows sushi-grade salmon from a small amount of fish cells in a lab-setting. Adjacent to its pilot production facility, the sushi bar will be part of a complex operated by Wildtype and designed by acclaimed architect Shuo Zhai which features an education center with bleacher seating and a glass door separating the tasting room from the production floor—elements that promote transparency in the novel cultivated meat industry, and a stark contrast to the opacity of the global industrial fishing industry.

Israelis taste the future with lab-grown chicken 'food revolution'

It looks like chicken and tastes like chicken, but diners in Israel are tucking into laboratory-grown "meat" that scientists claim is an environmentally friendly way to feed the world's growing population.

In a small restaurant in a nondescript building in a science park in the central Israeli town of Ness Ziona, diners munched burgers and minced meat rice rolls made with "cultured chicken" -- meat grown in the adjacent SuperMeat production site.

"It was delicious, the flavour was great," said Gilly Kanfi, a self-described "meat eater" from Tel Aviv, who had signed up for the meal months in advance.

"If I didn't know, I would have thought it was a regular chicken burger."

Hunter Biden ‘Has the Right’ to Sell Artwork to Anonymous Buyers for \$500K

Bergès is holding an art exhibition in the fall, where Hunter’s art is expected to sell anywhere from $75,000-$500,000. The entire venture has prompted ethics concerns, particularly given Hunter’s past work as his father served as vice president — striking deals with Chinese officials and raking in tens of thousands of dollars per month serving on the board of Burisma, a Ukrainian oligarch-owned oil and gas company, despite having no experience in the energy sector. His father would later brag about threatening to withhold aid from Ukraine unless officials fired the prosecutor conducting a corruption investigation into Burisma.

But instead of making the transactions more transparent and open, the White House is hoping to strike a deal to make buyers of Hunter Biden’s artwork, which is expected to sell for up to half a million dollars, anonymous.

Tom Cotton: Ethics Questions Surround China-Linked Hunter Biden Selling His Artwork

Sen. Tom Cotton (R-AR) said there are “tough” ethical questions that loom around Hunter Biden, who is “still investing in CCP [Chinese Communist Party]-linked firms,” as he is expected to sell his artwork for up to half a million dollars to “anonymous” buyers.

“Some very tough ethical questions about whether the president’s son, who is still investing in CCP-linked firms, should take $500,000 in payment (bribes) for his ‘artwork,’” Cotton said in reaction to reports of the White House crafting a plan to address mounting ethics questions surrounding Hunter Biden’s art venture.

Is this Sports Illustrated's most inclusive runway show yet? Curvy models - including a personal chef and an influencer - set pulses racing in Miami at annual swimwear showcase

- Sports Illustrated revealed several of this year's Swimsuit Issue models in March
- At the annual showcase last night at Mondrian South Beach in Miami, the curvy models looked sensational on the catwalk
- Introduced a diverse cast of women of different ages with different body types
- Cast included Canadian-born Amanda Kay and personal chef Chelsea Heath

Sports Illustrated has shown its commitment to inclusivity by featuring a host of curvy models at its annual iconic fashion show.

The magazine revealed several of this year's Swimsuit Issue models ahead of their official launch back in March, introducing a diverse cast of women of different ages, body types, and backgrounds.

And last night in Miami, the stunning swimsuit models took to the runway at the swish Mondrian South Beach hotel to celebrate the release of the iconic annual magazine, with a host of different body types on display.

Among this year's gorgeous women were model and actress Saje Nicole, curve model Amanda Kay, personal chef Chelsea Heath, social media influencer Natalie Mariduena and model and actress Christen Harper.
